

asatkāryavādin. See S'āṅkarabhāṣya 2. 1. 10, 18: and 2. 2. 11.

- कारणगुणप्रक्रमन्यायः is explained as follows in Vāchaspatyam (s v. न्याय) :—“कारणगुणाः सजातीयगुणान् कार्यं आरभन्ते यथा तन्तुरूपादयः स्वकार्ये पटे सजातीयरूपादीनारभन्ते न विजातीयानेवं यत्र कारणगुणानुगमस्तत्रास्य प्रवृत्तिः” ॥

Page 17. In the edition, except that of Dr. Böhlingk, definitions of चित्त and अहङ्कार are given after the words “अनयोरेव चित्ताहङ्कारयोरन्तर्भावः” but this is not supported by my manuscripts. It looks as if they had got into the text from Rāmatīrtha's commentary where they occur verbatim (page 101).

Page 18. जीवः । The description of Jīva which is given in Brahmasūtrabhāṣya may prove of interest. He is not born and does not die; birth and death relate only to his body (2. 3. 16); he is not produced or absorbed, as ether is (2. 3. 17); he is the highest Brahma in contact with an upādhi, and is said to be ज्ञः a term which, according to S'ankara, means merely नित्यचेतन्यः and not a knowing subject (2. 3. 18); he is not of small size but omnipresent (विभुः) like Brahma (2. 3. 29); he is associated with buddhi so long as he continues to transmigrate (2. 3. 30); he is not really an independent agent, but his activity is due to buddhi (2. 3. 40); his activity is in subordination to God, who impels him to good or evil according as He desires to elevate or degrade him in the future (2. 3. 41); he is 'as it were' a part of God, but not really so, since God has no parts (2. 3. 43); he is described as निहीनोपाधिसंपन्नः (2. 3. 45); he is a mere reflection of God (2. 3. 50); in transmigration he is attended by the chief vital air, the organs, mind, avidyā, works pūrvaprajñā, and the subtle elements (3. 1. 1); he is non-different from God, though the fact is concealed by avidyā (3. 2. 5, 6); without an upādhi he would not be jīva, and in reality he never ceases to be Brahma (3. 2. 7, 9); in sound sleep he is joined to Brahma, but returns to his own body on awaking (3. 2. 9, 31); there are only four states into which he can possibly enter, and there is no fifth; but he may be in a state of swoon which is said to be a semi-entrance into sound sleep and another state (3. 2. 10); shaking off avidyā by means of vidyā, he becomes one with the infinite prājña (3. 2. 26).

Page 18. मनस्तु ज्ञानेन्द्रियैः सहितं । All the editions, without exception, read here कर्मेन्द्रियैः which is opposed by most of my MSS. of the text and by all those of the commentary. My reading is confirmed by Vivekachūḍāmaṇi 170—“ज्ञानेन्द्रियाणि च मनश्च मनोमयः स्यात्” and by Pañchadas i. 35—“सात्त्विकैर्ध्यान्द्रियैः साकं विमर्षात्मा मनोमयः” ।

Page 19. With the quotation from Gorakṣās'ataka, compare the following from Sures'vara's Mānasollāsa (ix. 14, 15)—“नागो ह्रिकाकरः कूर्मो निमेषोन्मेषकारकः । श्रुतं करोति कृकलो देवदत्तो विजृम्भणम् । स्थैर्यं धनञ्जयः कुर्यान्मृतं च न विमुञ्चति” ॥

— सूक्ष्मशरीरं । As to this enveloping Jīva during transmigration, see reference above to Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 3. 1. 1; also Notes to page 100.

Page 20. In line 11, the editions, contrary to my MSS., insert सूक्ष्माग्निः before the word मनोवृत्तिभिः ।

Page 21. पञ्चीकरणं । The following is from S'ankara's Pañchīkaraṇa—“पञ्चमहाभूतानामेकैकं द्विधा विभज्य चतुर्धा कृत्वा स्वार्धभागं विहायेतरेषु पञ्चधा पञ्चीकृतेषु पञ्चीकरणं भवति” । Sures'vara's vārtika on the above reads as follows:—“पृथिव्यादीनि भूतानि प्रत्येकं विभजेद्विधा । एकैकं भागमादाय चतुर्धा विभजेत्पुनः ॥ ८ ॥ एकैकं भागमेकस्मिन्भूते संवेशयेत्कमात् । ततश्चाकाशभूतस्य भागाः पञ्च भवन्ति हि ॥ ९ ॥ वाय्वादिभागाश्चत्वारो वाय्वादिष्वेवमादिशेत् । पञ्चीकरणमेतत्स्यादित्याहुस्तत्त्ववेदिनः ॥ १० ॥”

Page 22. “वैशेष्यात्” So all my MSS., but most of the editions reads वैशिष्ट्यात्. Dr. Ballantyne's rendering of this sūtra is—"But as they differ, the one is called this, and the other is called that." Bearing in mind, however, that the second "तद्वादः" forms no part of the aphorism but merely indicates the close of the chapter, it is clear that the above rendering of "तद्वादस्तद्वादः" will not do. And since S'ankara gives भूयस्त्वं as the equivalent of वैशेष्यं, the rest of the translation must go too. Here is a portion of the Bhāṣya on that aphorism:—"विशेषस्य भावो वैशेष्यं भूयस्त्वमिति यावत् । सत्यपि त्रिवृत्करणे कचित्कस्य विद्वत्प्रातोर्भूयस्त्वमुपलक्ष्यते अग्नेस्तेजोभूयस्त्वमुपलक्ष्यते तेषां त्रिवृत्करणे वैशेष्यादेः तेजोऽब्रह्मविशेषवादो भूतभौतिकविषय उपपद्यते । तद्वादस्तद्वाद इति पदार्थास्योऽध्यायपरिसमाप्तिं द्योतयति" ॥ So, too, the Brahmasūtratātparivivaraṇa—"विशेषस्य भावो वैशेष्यमाधिक्यम् । अग्नेस्तेजोभूयस्त्वं ... । इत्येवं त्रिवृत्कृतेष्वपि तत्तद्भागानां बहुत्वात्तदीयत्वव्यवहारास्त्रिगुणरजुवत् । तस्माद्वैशेष्यात्तद्वादः" ॥ Also the Vedāntakauśīrabhāṣya,—"विशेषस्य भावो वैशेष्यं भागभूयस्त्वमिति यावत् । तस्य पृथिव्यादौ दर्शनात्तद्वादः स तेजोऽब्रह्मविशेषवादो भौतिकवस्तुविशेषवादश्च उपपन्न इत्यर्थः" ॥ In the third edition of my Manual of Hindu Pantheism, I have therefore translated thus:—"Their appellation is on account of the preponderance [of that element after which each is named].

Page 23. Line 6. सर्वनराभिमानित्वात् । The word abhimānin occurs at least eight times in S'ankara's Bhāṣya, and once in sūtra 2. 1. 5, and in every case it has the sense of adhīśṭhātṛ. The following are examples:—"आदित्यादिशरीराभिमानिभ्यो जीवेभ्यः" 1. 1. 21; "पृथिव्याद्यभिमानिकाश्चिदेवः ॥" 1. 2. 18.

— Line 24. इन्द्रियैरर्थोपलब्धेश्च । Compare Rāmānjan's quotation, on p. 114, from S'ankara's Pañchikaraṇa.

एवं वृत्तिभेदेनैकमप्यन्तःकरणं मन इति बुद्धिरित्यहंकार इति

चित्तमिति चाख्यायते । तदुक्तम्—‘मनो बुद्धिरहंकारश्चित्तं करणमान्त-रम् । संशयो निश्चयो गर्वः स्मरणं विषया इमे ॥’ See, too, Sures'vara's Pañchikaravārtika, 33. 34.

They are also called Lokāyatikas (as in S'āṅkarabhāṣya 1. 1. 1; 2. 2. 2; 3. 3. 53, 54.), but Rāmatīrtha seems to limit this term to one subdivision of them. See page 115.

— The two Baudddhas referred to are supposed to represent the views of the Yogyāchāras and Mādhyamikas, respectively. “Some maintain that all is void, following, as it seems, a literal interpretation of Buddha's sūtras. To these the designation of Mādhyamika is assigned by several of the commentators of the Vedānta...Other disciples of Buddha except internal sensation or intelligence (viññāna), and acknowledge all else to be void. They maintain the eternal existence of conscious sense alone. These are called Yogāchāras.” Colebrooke's Essays, i. 415. Brahmasūtras 2. 2. 28—32 are supposed to be directed against these two sects of Buddhists.

Page 27. The Prābhākaras and Bhāṭṭas are the followers of the learned Mīmāṃsakas Prabhākara and Kumārila Bhaṭṭa. Essays i. 322, 329.

Page 28. स्थूलान्धतीन्याय. In Vāchaspatyam (s. v. न्याय) this is explained in language very similar to that of our commentary, and then is added—“एवं यत्रातिसूक्ष्मदुर्विज्ञेयवस्तुविज्ञानाय क्रमेण तत्समीपसमीपतरसमीपतमं वस्तु शास्त्रेण तत्तयोच्यते तत्र स्थूलान्धतीन्यायोऽवतरति । अयमेव केनचिद्विद्वत्प्रदर्शनन्यायत्वेनोदाह्रियते” ॥ In the same lexicon, under अन्धतीदर्शनन्याय (p. 360.), the following explanation is given:—“प्रथमस्थूलदर्शनेन सूक्ष्मदर्शनरूपे न्याये । ‘यथास्थूलतीदिदर्शयिषुस्तत्समीपस्थां स्थूलां ताराममुख्यां प्रथममस्थूलतीति ग्राहयित्वा तां प्रत्याख्याय पश्चाद्विद्वत्प्रतीतिमेव ग्राहयति’ शा° भा°” ॥ The passage quoted in this definition is from S'ārīraka- bhāṣya 1. 1. 8, and there is another of similar import in 1. 1. 12. see अरुन्धतीप्रदर्शनन्याय in Maxims i (2nd edn.).

Page 29. “सतत्त्वतोऽन्यथाप्रथा &c.” Cf. Vedāntakalpataru-parimala on sūtra 1. 2. 21:—“तत्त्वतोऽन्यथाभावः परिणामः । अतत्त्वतोऽन्यथाभावो विवर्तः” ॥ विकार (or परिणाम) and विवर्त may be rendered ‘modification’ and ‘illusory manifestation’ respectively. The commentary gives one example of the former, viz. the transformation of milk into curds; another is that of gold into an ornament. In the former case, there is a modification of name, form, and substance; in the latter, of name and form only. The common illustration of विवर्त is that of a rope mistaken for a snake, or of nacre imagined to be silver; where, of course, there is no actual modification of any kind. On page 30, the commentator says—“अत्र वेदान्ते ब्रह्मणि प्रपञ्चमानस्य परिणामभावो नाङ्गीक्रियते,” a statement which, though true of the advaitavādin school, is not true of some of the others. The viśiṣṭādvaitavādins, for example, of whom Rāmānuja is the great representative, hold that “whatever is presented to us by ordinary experience, viz. matter in all its various modifications and the individual souls of different classes and degrees, are essential real constituents of Brahman’s nature.” And again:—“The world, with its variety of material forms of existence and individual souls, is not unreal Māyā, but a real part of Brahman’s nature, the body investing the universal Self.” Dr. Thibaut’s Translation of Vedāntasūtras, pp. xxviii and xxx. It is impossible to read the older Upaniṣads without seeing that this is their teaching also. For a concise explanation of the terms विवर्तवादः, परिणामवादः, आरम्भवादः &c., see Pañchadas’i xiii. 6-10, Saṅkṣepaśārīraka ii. 57-70, and Professor Venis’ valuable note on p. 488, vol. viii. of Pandit. The following is from Appayadikṣita’s Siddhāntaleśa, p. 10 (Vizianagaram Series):—“ब्रह्मणश्चोपादानत्वमद्वितीयकूटस्थचेतन्यरूपस्य

न परमाणूनामिवारम्भकस्वरूपं न वा प्रकृतेरिव परिणामित्वरूपं किन्तु
अविद्यया वियदादिप्रपञ्चरूपेण विवर्तमानत्वलक्षणम् । वस्तुनस्तत्स-मसत्ताकोऽन्यथाभावः परिणामः तदसमसत्ताको विवर्त इति वा

कारणाभिन्नं कार्यं परिणामः तदभेदं विनैव तद्व्यतिरेकेण दुर्बलं कार्यं
विवर्त इति वा विवर्तपरिणामयोर्विवेकः” ॥

Page 30. “अधिष्ठानावशेषो हि &c.” The immediate context of the passage quoted, in the MS. to which I referred, is as follows:—“एकैव परमा शक्तिर्माया दुर्घटकारिणी ॥ ६ ॥ शिव-स्यानन्तरूपा सा विद्यया तस्य नश्यति । या विनश्यति सा माया
विन्मात्रे परिकल्पिता ॥ ७ ॥ अधिष्ठानावशेषो हि नाशः कल्पित-वस्तुनः । भावस्यैव ह्यभावत्वं नाशो भावस्य भावता ॥ ८ ॥ भावा- भावस्वभावाभ्यामन्य एव हि कल्पिताः । अधिष्ठानस्य नाशो न सत्य-त्वादेव सर्वदा ॥ ९ ॥”

Page 31. वाच्यार्थ and लक्ष्यार्थ. These terms are thus explained in Sāhityadarpaṇa ii. 10, 11:—“अर्थो वाच्यश्च
लक्ष्यश्च व्यंग्यश्चेति त्रिधा मतः । वाच्योऽर्थोऽभिधया बोध्यो लक्ष्यो
लक्षणया मतः । व्यंग्यो व्यञ्जनया ताः स्युस्तिष्ठः शब्दस्य शक्तयः” ॥ This is translated by Dr. Ballantyne as follows:—“The meaning [that may belong to a word] is held to be threefold, namely Express, Indicated, and Suggested.
The Express meaning is that conveyed to the understanding by the [word's] Denotation; the [meaning]
Indicated is held to be conveyed by the [word's] Indication...Let these be the three powers of a word”.

- अथ महावाक्यार्थः । There are said to be twelve of these ‘great sentences’, and their importance in the eyes of the Vedāntin may be judged from the statement of Saṅkṣepasārāraṇa iii. 303—“विना महावाक्यमतो न कश्चिदुपासमद्वैतमवैति जन्तुः” । The Mahāvākyavivaraṇa professes to give them all; but my MS., a copy of that in the Tanjore Library (Dr. Burnell's Catalogue, p. 91) gives only eleven. They are as under:—तत्त्वमसि । अहं
ब्रह्मास्मि । अयमात्मा ब्रह्म । एष त आत्मान्तर्ह्यस्यमृतः । स यश्चायं
पुरुषे यश्चासावादित्ये स एकः । प्रज्ञा प्रतिष्ठा प्रज्ञानं ब्रह्म । विज्ञानमा-

नन्दं ब्रह्म । सत्यं ज्ञानमनन्तं ब्रह्म । स एवमेव पुरुषो ब्रह्म । सर्वं खल्विदं ब्रह्म । एकमेवाद्वितीयम् । The same list is given in the Māhāvākyārthadarpaṇa (Burnell's Catalogue, p. 94); but as printed in the Catalogue, the twelve are made up by trisecting No. 5 (Tait. Upaniṣad 2. 8. 1), and uniting Nos. 6 and 7 (Aitareya 5. 3, and Bṛihadāraṇyaka 3. 9. 28)! I have also a copy of a Māhāvākyavivaraṇa printed in the Jagadīśvara Press, Bombay, in 1883; but it is a totally different work from that referred to above, and consists of a lengthy exposition of four only of the great sentences. It probably corresponds with No. Lxxxvi, p. 94 of Burnell's List.

- The quotation from Sures'vara's Naīṣkarmyasiddhī is found also in the fifth Book of his Bṛihadāraṇyakopaniṣadbhāṣyavārtika; and, slightly modified to suit the Ārya metre, in S'ankara's (?) Svātmanirūpaṇa.

Page 34. भागलक्षणा. This is otherwise called भागत्यागलक्षणा, or जहदजहल्लक्षणा. Under the latter the Vāchaspatyam (p. 3081) has the following:—"वाच्यायैकदेशत्यागेनैकदेशवृत्तौ लक्षणायाम् । यथा सोऽयं देवदत्त इत्यत्र तत्कालैतत्कालरूपायैत्यागेन केवलदेवदत्तमात्रार्थबोधनाद्वाच्यायैकदेशवृत्तिता । एवं तत्त्वमसीतिवाक्ये विरुद्धसर्वज्ञत्वालपज्ञत्वार्थेत्यागेन चैतन्यमात्रबोधनात्तथात्वम्" ॥ This combined form, and the two varieties of which it is a combination, are explained in the fourth chapter of Vedāntaparibhāṣā; for which, with Prof. Venis' translation, see Pandit, vol. vi, pp. 217-220. See also a long note on page 92-94 of my Manual of Hindu Pantheism, and Vivaraṇaprameya-saṅgraha, p. 229.

- वाक्यार्थ is used here and no subsequent pages as a synonym of वाच्यार्थ.

Page 35. "संसर्गो वा &c." This verse of the Panchadas'ī, and six other in the immediate context, are found also in the Vākyaivr̥tti, a work which Dr. Hall positively, and Dr. Burnell doubtfully, attributes to S'ankara. My manuscript is a copy of No. 6495 in the Tanjore Library (p. 91 of Catalogue), and consists of 55 (not 52) verses with a commentary. If it is really the work of S'ankara, it must be the original source of the above verses, as it is of that in the sixth line of the commentary—"मानान्तरविरोधे तु &c." As regards this verse, its reading agrees with that of MSS. CKL in the first line; whilst the latter half of the second line reads प्रतीतिर्लक्षणोच्यते. So, too, in the commentary on Chit-sukhī i. 29 (Paṇḍit, vol. v. p. 202) where it also occurs. But compare Svātmanirūpaṇa, 32—"मानान्तरोपरोधे मुख्यार्थस्यापरिग्रहे जाते । मुख्याविनाकृतेऽर्थे वा वृत्तिः सैव लक्षणा प्रोक्ता ॥" It may not be out of place to note here that in the ṣikā on verse 45 of the Vākyavṛtti, reference seems to be made to a Bṛihadvākyavṛtti. The closing words of that verse are "तथा व्याख्यातमादरात्," on which the commentator says "व्याख्यातं बृहत्यां वाक्यवृत्ताविति शेषः"।

- भागान्तरमपि परित्यज्य. Dr. Ballantyne translates in accordance with this reading though, in common with all succeeding editors, he reads भागान्तरमपरित्यज्य. His translation is as follows:—"In this sentence, on the other hand, coherence is not to be arrived at by our supposing the terms to be 'indicatory with the relinquishment of their own primary meaning;' because, since there is only a partial incompatibility between the things denoted in the sentence which asserts the identity of the invisible Soul and of the Soul visible [as embodied], it would not be fit that, abandoning the residue of the meaning, there should be indicated something else." The italics are mine.

Page 39. चित्तवृत्तिरुदेति. The following explanation of this operation is given in Vedāntaparibhāṣā i. "यथा तद्भागोदकं छिद्राभिर्गत्य कुल्यात्मना केदारान्प्रविश्य तद्देव चतुष्कोणाद्याकारं भवति तथा तेजसमन्तःकरणमपि चक्षुरादिद्वारा घटादिविषयदेशं गत्वा घटादिविषयाकारेण परिणमते, स एव परिणामो वृत्तिरित्युच्यते” । For Prof. Venis’ translation of this passage, and valuable notes thereon, see Pandit, vol. iv. pp. 341-43. See also page 105 of my Manual of Hindu Pantheism.

Page 43. The Bṛihatsaṃhitā referred to in the footnote is not the astrological work of Varāhamihira; but may possibly be that on philosophy, or Dharma, to which reference is made in the abridged St. Petersburg Lexicon. In the list of Law books given in Dr. Bühler’s Catalogue of MSS. in Gujarāt, there is a Bṛihatsaṃhitā attributed to Vyāsa.

Page 44. The quotation from Chhāndogya 6. 1. 4 is one of those which go to prove that the ancient philosophers held Brahma to be the material cause of the world; a fact which is clearly recognized in Brahmasūtras 1. 4. 23—27. Notice especially sūtra 26, where the term pariṇāma is used.

— विजातीय°. The reading given in the text of all my manuscripts; but Drs. Ballantyne and Böhlingk read विजातीय...वस्तुनि तदाकाराकारिताया बुद्धेः सजातीय°.

Page 45. समाधिः। See a helpful note by Mr. Venis on p. 669 of Pandit, vol. v; also a footnote on page 21 of Prof. Cowell’s translation of Kusumāñjali, Rāmatīrtha points out (p. 129) that the two varieties of samādhi correspond with those termed सम्प्रज्ञात and असम्प्रज्ञात in the Yoga; for which see Dr. Rājendralāl Mitra’s translation of Aphorisms of Yoga (Bib. Indica) pp. 17-24.

Page 47. The statement here, in text and commentary, as to the non-existence of the vṛtti in sound sleep, seems to be in opposition to that in Section 8, where it is said that Īśvara and Prājña experience pleasure during sound sleep, “ajñānavṛttibhiḥ”. This, too, is the doctrine of the Yoga, as will be seen from Aphorisms i. 10, 11 (and commentary), where निद्रा is clearly synonymous with सुषुप्ति.

Page 47. यमनियमासन°. For an excellent popular description of these accessories to nirvikalpakasamādhi, in the Yoga System from which the definitions are taken, see Sub. Asst. Surgeon Paul's Treatise on Yoga Philosophy (2nd edn. Benares, 1882). Khecharīmudrā, Mūlabandha, the varieties of kumbhaka and āsana, and other interesting practices of Yogins, are there clearly explained. See also Translation of Sarvadarśanaśāstragraha (Trübner's Oriental Series), Hathayoga-pradīpikā (Nirṇaya-sāgara Press, Bombay, 1889), and the last chapter of S'āradaṭīlaka (Benares).

- The पट्चक्र of the commentary (line 16) is a set of six mystical circles on the body, in the region of the sūṣumṇā, and is here said to consist of स्वाधिष्ठान, मणिपूर, अनाहत, विशुद्ध, आज्ञा and निर्वाण. I can find no authority, however, for regarding the last mentioned as a chakra. Under the word चक्र, the St. Petersburg and Prof. Monier Williams' Lexicons, and the Vāchaspatyam, give the first place to मूलाधार and exclude निर्वाण altogether. So, also, the Tantrasāra (p. 130a of Benares edition) in its description of तारापूजा. In the Gorakṣas'ataka, too, आधार, as it is there called, comes first. According to the Vāchaspatyam (s. v. मूलाधार), the mūlādhāra is one of the circles, and also a triangular space which it describes thus:—"नाभिलिङ्गयोर्मध्ये तस्य द्वि शरीरस्य सकलनाडीनां मूलस्थानत्वात्तथात्वम् । 'मूलाधारे त्रिकोणाख्य इच्छाज्ञानक्रियात्मके । मध्ये स्वयम्भुलिङ्गं तु कोटिसूर्यसमप्रभं', इत्युक्तलक्षणे त्रिकोणाकारे तत्रोक्ते" ॥ Nirvāṇa is described in the same Lexicon as a mantra, and an explanatory passage is cited from the Āgamavilasatantra, a portion of which is as follows:—"कुलुकां मूर्ध्नि सज्जप्य हृदि सेतुं विचिन्तयेत् । महासेतुं विशुद्धे तु षोडशारे समुद्धरेत् । मणिपूरे तु निर्वाणं महाकुण्डलिनीमधः" ॥ Then follows a description of the mantra.

Page 48. I cannot trace the verse "संसारमेव &c." but Sāyana, in his Com. on Parāś'aras'mṛiti (Bib. Ind. vol. i. p. 534) ascribes it to Aṅgiras. The next couplet "अत्यन्विदिषासिञ्चै &c." is found in the Introductory chapter to Sures'vara's vārtika on Bṛihadāraṇyako-paṇiṣadbhāṣya, verse 14.

Page 48. पद्मस्वस्तिकादीनि. The following āsanas are named in Sures'vara's Mānasollāsa ix. 24-26. "स्वस्तिकं गोमुखं पद्मं इंसाख्यं ब्रह्मनामकम् । नृसिंहं गरुडं कूर्मं नागाख्यं वैद्युतासनम् । वीरं मयूरवज्राख्यं सिद्धाख्यं रौद्रमासनम् । योन्थासनं विदुः शाकं पूर्वं पश्चिमतानकम् । निरालम्बनयोगस्य निरालम्बनमासने" ॥ See, too, Vyāsa on Yogasūtra ii. 46.

— सञ्चितकर्म 'accumulated works,' that is, the works of past lives, which are stored up, and will bring about future births. On page 54, two other kinds are mentioned, viz. क्रियमाणानि or 'current', and आरब्धफलानि or 'fructescent'; the latter being that portion of the accumulated works which has brought about the present existence and will influence it until its close. Works are recognized by all the schools of philosophy as the cause of transmigration, and मोक्ष is simply deliverance from the effects of them. The permanence of these effects is set forth in Mahābhārata iii. 13868—"यत्तेन किञ्चिद्दि कृतं हि कर्म तदश्नुते नास्ति कृतस्य नाशः" । The Vedānta teaches that the knowledge of Brahma entirely destroys the granary of accumulated works and renders current ones inoperative in the future; but the fructescent works must be exhausted before the Jīvanmukta is completely free. This latter fact is clearly stated in Vivekachūḍāmaṇi 453—"ज्ञानोदयात्पुरारब्धं कर्म ज्ञानाच्च

Page 55. “बुद्धाद्वैतसतत्त्वस्य &c.” The rendering of the third line here quoted has always been a difficulty, inasmuch as it has generally been supposed to be connected with the couplet preceding it. I traced it, however, in 1893, to the Upades'asāhasrī, (12. 13) where it forms the 2nd line of the verse. The whole verse, and the commentary, stand thus:—

“यो वेदालुसद्द्रष्टृत्वमात्मनोऽकर्तृतां तथा ।

ब्रह्मवित्त्वं तथा मुक्त्वा स आत्मज्ञो न चेतः” ॥

“एवं श्रुत्युपदेशात्सर्वत्र सर्वदाद्वयमात्मानमनुसन्दधानस्यापि ब्रह्मविद-

It is no wonder, then, that scholars have found it difficult to make the two quotations fit together, since the second one has no connection whatever with the first and is incomplete without its immediate context. The first translator was Dr. Ballantyne, who rendered the third line thus—“[Well, the difference consists in] the knowledge of God. So, such a one [as knows God—and not the dog, who knows nothing of the truth—] being liberated, is, and no one else is, the knower of Soul.” This is, of course, entirely wrong—to say nothing of the misrendering of Brahma by God. Dr. Böhtlingk's [in 1877] was very similar, namely—“Die Kenntniss des Brahman. Wer auf diese Weise erlöst wurde der und kein Anderer ist ein Kenner der Seele”. My own rendering, also incorrect, was—“Except the fact of knowing Brahma, there is no difference; the one knows the self, and the other [the dog] does not; but I would invite attention to the remarks on page 127 of the 3rd edition of my translation, which was published in 1891. In the new edition of Dr. Böhlingk's Chrestomathie (prepared by Prof. R. Garbe in 1909), the line is rendered, "Wer seine Auffassung des Brahma so aufgibt (dass auch keine Spur von lehwahn zurückbleibt) der und kein Anderer ist ein Kenner der seele." The third line is quoted by Vidyāraṇya in his Jīvanmuktiviveka (p. 47 of Ānandās'rama edition) by way of warning the knower of Brahma against conceit (vidyāmada), but it is difficult to account for its abrupt insertion by Sadānanda, and it would be better to omit it, as Rāmatīrtha appears to have done.

Page 57. The quotation "न निरोधः &c." is found also in Vivekachūḍāmaṇi, where, as well as in Gaṇḍapāda's kārikas, the reading is बद्धः, not बन्धः as in my manuscripts. The sentiment contained in these lines is very common in Vedāntic writings—as, for example, in Yoga-vāsiṣṭha 4. 38. 22—"न बन्धोऽस्ति न मोक्षोऽस्ति नाबन्धोऽस्ति न बन्धनम् । अप्रबोधादिदं दुःखं प्रबोधात्प्रविलीयते" ॥

— अतितप्तलोहक्षिप्तनीरबिन्दुवत्. See Note to page 49 where this same simile occurs.

Page 58. The reading समवलीयन्ते is generally met with in this favourite quotation, though unsupported by either of the recensions of the Bṛihadāraṇyaka. As a further comment on the words "विमुक्तश्च विमुच्यते," read a portion of Vedāntaparibhāṣā viii (Paṇḍit, vol. vii. pp. 464-66).

— Line 19. I traced the quotation from S'eṣa by the help of Dr. Hall's Index, which mentions a Vedāntic work styled Paramārthasāra ascribed to S'eṣanāga. There is no manuscript of it in the India Office Library, but my friend the late Dr. Rost lent me a copy which was printed in Lucknow in 1876, and I found in it the verse I was in search of, and also that on page 68. The work consists of 88 āryā verses, the closing one being as follows:—"वेदान्तशास्त्रमखिलं विलोक्य शेषस्तु जगदाधारः । आर्यापञ्चाशीत्या वचनं परमार्थसारमिदम्" ॥ The title-page of this edition erroneously attributes it to S'ankara. In verse 78, instead of our "लिप्यते मनुजः," the reading there is "सृष्ट्यते विमलः;" and, in verse 82, the second line is "ज्ञानी समकालमुक्तः कैवल्यं यातीह विगतशोकः ।". This latter verse is quoted also in the second chapter of Jīvanmuktivivēka, and ascribed to S'eṣa.

Page 63. Line 20. अविद्याध्यस्तः । For a long disquisition on अध्यास see the opening part of Brahmasūtrabhāṣya.

— The Taittirīyopaniṣadbhāṣyavārtika referred to in the foot-note is the edition published in the Ānandās'rama Series, Poona, in 1889. It has the commentary of Ānandajñāna.

Page 64. अनागमापाधिधर्मस्य &c. Cf. उपयन्त्रपयन्धर्मः &c. in Maxims i (2nd edn.).

Page 65. "अरुणया विद्वाक्ष्या &c." The word गवा is wrongly inserted. See अरुणैकहायनीन्याय in Maxims iii (2nd edn.).

Page 66. The Āpastambasūtras quoted from are Dharmasūtras, published by Dr. Bühler, in Bombay. There is a translation of them, by the same scholar, in vol. ii. of Sacred Books of the East.

Page 69. "जरया वा &c." This quotation is from S'atapatha 12. 4. 1. 1, where, however, the reading is मुच्यते. It is cited in Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 3. 4. 7, from which Rāmātīrtha probably took it.

— "किमर्थो वयमध्येप्यामहे &c." This also is quoted in Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 3. 4. 9.

— "ये प्रजामीपिरे" । Rāmātīrtha most likely took this from the Bhāṣya on Chhāndogya 5. 10. 1, where it is quoted thus:—"तथा च पौराणिकः । ये प्रजामीपिरेऽधीरास्ते इमशानानि

भेजिरे । ये प्रजां नेषिरे धीरास्तेऽमृतत्वं हि भेजिर इत्याहुः” । The same thing is found in Āpastambadharmasūtras 2. 9. 23. 3-5; “अथ पुराणे श्लोकाबुदाहरन्ति । अष्टाशीतिसहस्राणि ये प्रजामीषिर ऋषयः । दक्षिणेनार्यम्णः पन्थानं ते इमशानानि भेजिरे । अष्टाशीतिसहस्राणि ये प्रजां नेषिर ऋषयः । उत्तरेणार्यम्णः पन्थानं तेऽमृतत्वं हि कल्पते” ॥ There are passages of similar import in Vāyu Purāṇa 50. 213, 219; and Matsya Purāṇa 123. 101 &c.

Page 70. I am unable to trace the quotation “ब्राह्मणेन षडङ्गो वेदः &c.,” but it looks as if it came from some dharma-sūtra. It is quoted in the Mahābhāṣya (p. 1.) and reproduced on page 113 of Prof. Max. Müller's Ancient Sanskrit Literature as a Vedic passage, but no hint is given as to its source.

— Line 23. आध्यात्मिकादिदुःखत्रयं । The दुःखत्रयं is referred to in Sāṅkhyakārikā 1, on which Vāchaspatimīśra remarks as follows:—दुःखानां त्रयं दुःखत्रयं तत्त्वतु आध्यात्मिकमाधिभौतिकमाधिदैविकं च । तत्राध्यात्मिकं द्विविधं शारीरं मानसं च । शारीरं वातपित्तश्लेष्मणां वैषम्यनिमित्तं मानसं कामक्रोधलोभमोहभयेर्ष्याविषादविषयविशेषादर्शननिबन्धनम् । सर्वं चैतदान्तरोपायसाध्यत्वादाध्यात्मिकं दुःखम् &c.”

Page 71. “अकुर्वन्विहितं कर्म &c.” There is no reasonable room for doubt that Rāmatīrtha took this, and the two succeeding experts, direct from Ānandagiri's ṭīkā on the opening part of Tait. Up. Bhāṣya. Not only so, but the whole of the substance of the discussion on नित्यकर्माणि, and, in some cases, entire passages in it, are taken from that source and from the same writer's commentary on Sures'vara's Tait. Bhāṣya. vārtika 1. 19-22. The reading “नरः पतनमृच्छति,” which is also found in this verse as quoted by Ānandagiri, looks as if it had been imported from Yājñavalkya-smṛiti iii. 219, where we read—“विहितस्यानुष्ठानान्निन्दितस्य च सेवनात् । अनिग्रहाच्चेन्द्रियाणां नरः पतनमृच्छति” ॥ It is possible to do a prescribed act at a wrong time, with reference to which see अकाले कृतमकृतं स्यात् in Maxims iii (2nd edn.).

Page 71. “नित्यानामक्रिया &c.” The greater part of the immediate context is taken bodily from Ānandagiri on Taittirīya-bhāṣya, and on Tait. bhāṣyavārtika i. 21, 22. The quotation “विचिकित्सन्द्भोत्रियः” is from the former source.

Page 73. पञ्चमहायज्ञादि. See Manu iii. 69–71, where they are enumerated; also S'atapatha 11. 5. 6.

— Line 11. उपरागस्नानादि. See Vāchaspatyam (s. v. उपराग) where there is an extract from Puras'charana-chandrikā commencing thus:—“चन्द्रसूर्योपरागे च स्नात्वा प्रयतमानसः । स्पर्शादिमोक्षपर्यन्तं जपेन्मन्त्रं समाहितः” ॥

— वाजिनां &c. This is a name of the followers of the White Yajur-Veda. A more common title is वाजसनेयिनः, the followers of वाजसनेय a name given to Yājñyavalkya, a disciple of the sun (वाजसनि). The etymology of this last word is said to be “वाजस्य अन्नस्य सनिर्दानं येन”, but that is probably fanciful. For another of the same class, see Viṣṇu Purāṇa 3. 5. 25–29. Agnirahasya is the name of the tenth kāṇḍa of the S'atapatha.

Page 74. “नित्यनैमित्तिकैरेव &c.” I have searched far and wide for this quotations, but all in vain. The verse is cited in full on page 286 of S'ridhara's Com. on Pras'astapāda's Vaiśeṣikabhāṣya, and the second line stands thus “ज्ञानं च विमलीकुर्वन्नभ्यासेन च पाचयेत्”. For the thought immediately preceding the quotation, see Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 4. 1. 18.

— खादिरादिवत्संयोगपृथक्त्व° । See Jaimini 4. 3.5 and Bhāṣya thereon. The two-fold use of khādira, for sacrificial posts and as medicine &c., is mentioned in Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 3. 4. 33, as follows:—“यथैकस्यापि खादिरस्य नित्येन संयोगेन क्रत्वर्थत्वं अनित्येन संयोगेन पुरुषार्थत्वं तद्वत्”. See Ānandagiri on this, in Ānandāśrama edition.

Page 75. “कषायपक्तिः &c.” Works are here said to destroy passion. This passage is quoted in part in Vedānta- paribhāṣā vii. See too Mokṣadharmā 245. 3. and the context of the same quotation in Brih. Ār. Vārtikā 1. 4. 1586 (page 747 of Ānandāsrama edition).

Page 75. “तद्यथा फलार्थे निमित्ते &c.” In citing this passage, writers almost invariably change निमित्ते into निमित्ते or निर्मिते, both of which are wrong. The scholiast on the vārtikā passage quoted in the foot-note explains the word thus—“निमित्ते निहिते रोपिते,” a meaning which it would be impossible to get out of the other two forms. The root is मि क्षेपे. For further information regarding this, see “आद्ये फलार्थे &c.” in Maxims iii (2nd edn.). Rāmatīrtha most probably took the quotation from Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 4. 3. 14, where it stands in a context of similar import.

— “विद्यया तदारोहन्ति &c.” This is quoted in Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 3. 3. 31, to which Rāmatīrtha refers in the next line, and again in sūtra 52.

Page 76. गुणोपसंहारपाद appears to be the name given to the third pāda of the third chapter. See especially sūtra 5, and Śāyana's adhikaraṇamālā thereon.

— “आभूतसम्भवं स्थानं &c.” This quotation, together with the three preceding ones and much of the preceding matter, came from the Bhāṣya on Chhāndogya 5. 10. 1. Another reading for भाव्यते is भाव्यते.

— आपेक्षिक ‘relative’; आत्यन्तिक ‘absolute’.

Page 77. नष्टाश्चदग्धरथन्याय. For full information regarding this very ancient simile, see Maxims i (2nd edn.).

— प्रतीकोपासन. For the results of this, see Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 4. 1. 4 and 4. 3. 15.

— न स्यात्यतीति &c. “The eternal is that which is incompatible with the popular and scriptural expression ‘it will not endure.’” P. (trans.)

Page 78. “विमतोऽचेतनवर्गोऽनित्यो विभक्तत्वात्.” See Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 2. 3. 7, 17.

Page 79. "पाठक्रमादर्थक्रमस्य बलीयस्त्वात्." See पाठक्रमन्याय in Maxims iii (2nd edn.), and राजपुरप्रवेशन्याय in Maxims ii (2nd edn.).

Page 80. "प्रवृत्तिलक्षणो योगः &c." This couplet appears three times in Sures'vara's Bṛih. Ār. vārtika, but without acknowledgment.

Page 81. गुणोपसंहारन्याय 'the principle of collecting together attributes from other sources.' For this, see Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 3. 3. 7 (closing portion), and 3. 3. 19, 20, 26, 58. See also the Note on "शान्तो दान्तः" (p. 143).

— "श्रद्धावित्तः". "Rich in faith." Sures'vara has the following verse on this word in his Bṛihad. vārtika 6. 4:—"श्रद्धैव वित्तमस्येति नान्यदस्य यतस्ततः। श्रद्धावित्तोऽयमित्युक्तः संन्यासे सर्वकर्मणाम्" ॥

Page 83. न प्रधानादि। The greater part of the first and part of the second chapter of the Brahmasūtrabhāṣya, are devoted to the disproof of the claims of the *Sāṅkhya*s as to Pradhāna being the cause of the world.

Page 85. Line 12. क्वचिदृष्टपूर्वस्य &c. Compare S'ankara's definition of अध्यास in opening part of Brahmasūtrabhāṣya "कोऽयमध्यासो नामेति। उच्यते। स्मृतिरूपः परत्र पूर्वदृष्टावभासः।"

Page 86. "यस्याज्ञानं भ्रमस्तस्य &c." For this, see Maxims iii (2nd edn.).

Page 88. For the sixth means of right knowledge, namely 'non-perception,' see Vedāntaparibhāṣā, chap. v. (The Paṇḍit, vol. vii, page 318), and translation of Sarvaśāstraśāstrānugraha, page 68. Compare Patanjali's six causes of अनुपलब्धि (in Mahābhāṣya 4. 1. 3) with those of Sāṅkhya-kārikā 7.

Page 89. "अविद्याया अविद्यात्वं &c." All my MSS., and one of the Vārtika, read thus in first line; but the Ānandās'rāma edition of the latter has अविद्याया अविद्यात्वे. The second line, however, differs considerably from that given by Rāmatīrtha. In the edition it reads “मानावातासहिष्णुत्वमसाधारणमिष्यते,” but in Advaita-brahmasiddhi, where it is also quoted (p. 287), the reading is “प्रमाणाद्यसहिष्णुत्वमसाधारणमिष्यते.”

Page 91. कृतनाशाकृताभ्यागमप्रसङ्गः । The expression अकृताभ्यागमप्रसङ्ग occurs in Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 2. 1. 36, and in 2. 3. 41. Ānandagiri explains it thus:—“अकृतेति । अननुष्ठिते कर्मणि फलप्राप्तौ विधितिविषयशान्तिरर्थक्यमिति भावः” । Dr. Thibaut renders it “the doctrine of rewards and punishments being allotted without reference to previous good or bad actions.” In 3. 2. 9 we have the double expression अकृताभ्यागमकृतविप्रणाशौ.

Page 92. “जीवाश्रया &c.” The second line of the verse is “तद्विरुद्धमिदं वाक्यमात्मा त्वज्ञानगोचरः” । Prof. A. Venis translates it thus:—“Knowers of the truth maintain the Nescience has jīva as its locus and Brahman as its object. Opposed to this is declaration that the Self (jīva) is an object for Nescience.”

— “तरलविद्यां विततां.” A couplet quoted on pages 195 and 284 of Advaitabrahmasiddhi stands thus:— “तरलविद्यां विततां हृदि यस्मिन्निवेशिते । योगी मायाममेयां यत्तस्यै ज्ञानात्मने नमः” ॥ It is found also on p. 169 of the Ānandāśrama edition of Sarvādars'ansamgraha, in the newly discovered chapter on the S'ankarādars'ana. I can trace it no further.

Page 93. Line 12. सत्कार्यवाद ‘the doctrine of the prior existence of an effect in its cause’, as maintained by Vedāntins. The opposite view is termed असत्कार्यवाद. For the former, see Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 2. 1. 7, and for the latter 2. 1. 10. See, too, Vāchaspathyam, s. v. उत्पत्ति.

Page 96. “प्रकृतिश्च &c.” This important sūtra teaches that Brahma is not only the efficient but also the material cause of the universe; and even S'ankara explains it in this sense. His concluding words are “तस्मादधिग्रान्तराभावादात्मनः कर्तृत्वमुपादानान्तराभावाच्च प्रकृतित्वम्.”

Page 96. Line 25. प्रत्यनुमान ‘contrary conclusion.’ The term is thus defined in the Vācaspatyam—“प्रतीपानुमाने। यथा पर्वतो वह्निमान्धूमवत्त्वादिति वादिनोके पर्वतो वह्ण्यभाववान्पाषाणमयत्वादिति प्रतिवादिनः प्रतिपक्षानुमानम्” ॥ — Line 26 &c. आश्रयासिद्ध, स्वरूपासिद्ध, and व्याप्यत्वासिद्ध. These three forms of fallacy are thus explained in the Tarkasāṅgraha:—“असिद्धस्त्रिविध आश्रयासिद्धः स्वरूपासिद्धो व्याप्यत्वासिद्धश्चेति। आश्रयासिद्धो यथा। गगनारविन्दं सुरभ्यरविन्दत्वात्सरोजारविन्दवत्। अत्र गगनारविन्दमाश्रयः स च नास्त्येव ॥ स्वरूपासिद्धो यथा। शब्दो गुणश्चाक्षुषत्वात्। अत्र चाक्षुषत्वं शब्दे नास्ति शब्दस्य श्रावणत्वात् ॥ सोपाधिको हेतुर्व्याप्यत्वासिद्धः। साध्यव्यापकत्वे सति साधनाव्यापक उपाधिः” ॥ For Translation, see Dr. Ballantyne’s second edition (1852). See also Tarka-bhāṣā, pp. 168-174 with Dr. Gangānāth Jhā’s translation, p. 69 &c.; and Aptē’s Sanskrit Dictionary s. v. असिद्ध.

Page 98. विशेषास्तावत्सामान्ये कल्पिताः। In Brahmasūtra-bhāṣya 2. 3. 9 we read “सामान्याद्विशेषा उत्पद्यमाना दृश्यन्ते मृदादेर्घटादयो न तु विशेषेभ्यः सामान्यम्”। Compare Tantravārtika, p. 794:—“सामान्यप्राप्त्यपेक्षश्च विशेषो नित्यमित्यते” and p. 1027, line 15:—“न तु निःसामान्यः कश्चिद्विशेष उपपद्यते.”

— प्रत्यनुमानबाधिकाः। For प्रत्यनुमान see above.

Page 99. Line 5. वियदधिकरण is Brahmasūtra 2. 3. 1-7. It discusses the question as to whether ākāśa is eternal or produced; and decides in favour of the latter.

— प्रधानाण्वादिवादा निरस्ताः। For the confutation of the Sāṅkhya and atomic theories, see Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 2. 2. 1-17, from which (and from 2. 1. 29) many of the expressions on this page have been taken.

— “यदस्ति यद्भाति &c.” I looked through the Yogavāsiṣṭha, and elsewhere, for this quotation, but failed to trace it.

Page 100. पुर्यष्टकं। This signifies the eight constituents of the elementary or subtle body which envelops the soul on its leaving the gross body. Kullūka, in his comment on Manu i. 56, explains it thus:—"पुर्यष्टकशब्देन भूतादी- न्यष्टावुच्यन्ते। तदुक्तं सनन्देन। 'भूतेन्द्रियमनोबुद्धिवासनाकर्मवायवः।

अविद्या चाष्टकं प्रोक्तं पुर्यष्टमृषिसत्तमः'। ब्रह्मपुराणेऽप्युक्तम्। 'पुर्यष्टकेन
लिङ्गेन प्राणाद्येन स युज्यते। तेन बद्धस्य वै बन्धो मोक्षो मुक्तस्य तेन तु'॥" See Dr. Bühler's note on the above verse in his translation of Manu. In the Bhāṣya on Brahma-sūtra 3. 1. 1, S'ankara says "जीवो मुख्यप्राणसचिवः सेन्द्रियः समनस्कोऽविद्याकर्मपूर्वप्रज्ञापरिग्रहः पूर्वदेहं विहाय देहान्तरं प्रपद्यते." Sures'vara uses काम in the place of the वासना of Sananda and of the पूर्वप्रज्ञा of S'ankara; and includes the four divisions of अन्तःकरण instead of two. In both these particulars, he is followed by Govindānanda in his comment on Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 2. 4. 6. where, also, S'ankara quotes the verse cited above from the Brahma-Purāṇa.

Page 100. पञ्चीकरणवार्तिक is Sures'vara's work, in 64 verses, explanatory of S'ankara's Pañchīkaraṇa from which we have a quotation on page 114. Both works exist in MS. only.

masūtrabhāṣya* 2. 3. 19, are Kaushī. 3. 3; 1. 1; Brih. 4. 4. 6.

— विलासिर्गच्छन्तः &c. See Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 2. 4. 7.

— हृदि प्राण इत्यभिधानात्। The expression हृदि प्राणः occurs in Brahma Upaniṣad, 2; but as Rāmatīrtha does not give it as a Vedic quotation I have not put it in inverted commas.

Page 106. मध्यप्रदीपन्याय. For this and the synonymous देहलीदीपन्याय see Maxims i (2nd edn.).

Page 107. "कुरुषु &c." This curious quotation, together with the entire argument, is from Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 3. 2. 3.

Page 108. अष्टका is described in Ās'vala-Grihyasūtra 2. 4. the first sūtra of which is—"हेमन्तशिशिरयोश्चतुर्णामपरपक्षाणामष्टमीष्वष्टकाः"। See also S'āñkhyāyana-grihya 3. 12, and Prof. Oldenberg's translation of both passages in vol. xxix of Sacred Books of the East.

Page 109. अर्धजरतीय. For this nyāya see Maxims i. (2nd edn.).

Page 110. प्रत्यक्षाप्रत्यक्षवृत्तेः। This refers to Vaiśeṣikasūtra 4. 2. 2. namely, "प्रत्यक्षाप्रत्यक्षाणां संयोगस्याप्रत्यक्षत्वात्पञ्चात्मकं न विद्यते," which Prof. Gough renders "the body is not composed of the five elements, for the conjunction of things perceptible and imperceptible is imperceptible."

Page 111. आरम्भवाद. The doctrine of the Vaiśeṣikas, or asatkāryavādins, who hold that "an effect is an entity entirely different from its cause, because it has had a beginning (ārambha), i. e. it was non-existent (asat) previous to its production; the piece of canvas is distinct from and did not previously exist in the threads, its material cause." (The Pañḍit, vol. viii. p. 488, on Pañchadas'i vi. 186). It is alluded to also in Saṅkṣepas'ārīraka ii. 63.

— तद्वृत्तसंविज्ञानो बहुव्रीहिः। The following note in Dr. Ballantyne's Laghu Kaumudī p. 173 (3rd edn.), makes this very clear. "Among Bahuvrīhi compounds, the Sanskrit grammarians distinguish those denoting that of which the matters implied in the name are perceived along with the thing itself (tadguṇasaṁvijnāna) from those denoting what is otherwise (atadguṇasaṁvijnāna). The stock illustration of the former kind is 'dīrghakarnam ānaya,' i. e. 'bring Long-ear,' where the long ears accompany and mark the individual; and of the latter kind, 'dṛiṣṭasāgaram ānaya,' i. e. 'bring him that has seen the ocean,' where the ocean does not accompany the man nor enable you to recognize him among a group of persons who have never seen it." See too, Mahābhāṣya 1. 1. 27; and 6. 1. 1 (vart. 14, 15).

Page 113. तडागकुल्या°. See my Manual of Hindu Pantheism (3rd edn.), p. 105.

Page 114. That the Pañchīkaraṇa, from which the quotation is made on this page, is really from the pen of the great S'ankarāchārya, is clearly established by the existence of the Pañchīkaraṇavārtika composed by his disciple Sures'vara. Verse 13 of the latter work paraphrases the quotation thus—"इन्द्रियैरर्थविज्ञानं देवतानुग्रहान्वितः । शब्दादिविषयं ज्ञानं तज्जागरितमुच्यते" ॥

— उत्क्रान्तिगत्या°. See note to page 103.

— "यथा ह्ययं ज्योतिरात्मा &c." Probably taken from Brahmasūtrabhāṣya 3. 2. 18 where it is quoted. It has not yet been traced to its source.

Page 121. "त्वमेकोऽसि बहुतनुप्रविष्टः". This is the reading of QR. The MS. N. has बहूननुप्रविष्टः which agrees with the Bib. Indica edition of the Āraṇyaka.

— "एकः सन् बहुधा विचारः". Most of my MSS. read विचचार. The clause is thus explained by Sāyaṇa:—"सर्वान्तर्यामी स्वकीयेनेश्वररूपेण एक एव सन् पुनर्जीवरूपेण बहुधा भूत्वा विचारः विविधचरणवान् भवति" ।

Page 122. "जगत्प्रतिष्ठा &c." The first verse is found also in the Bhāṣya on sūtra 2. 3. 14, and the second in Ānandagiri's commentary thereon.

Page 125. विशेषणाभावे विशिष्टाभावन्यायेन. See Laukikanyāyasañgraha (Benares edn.) p. 148, and Mallinātha on Tārkikarākṣā p. 230.

— अभिहितान्वयमतवत्। The abhikhitānvayavādins, or Naiyāyikas, hold that "the logical connection among the notions belonging to the several words in a sentence is apprehended after they are severally conveyed". The anvitābhidhānavādins, or Mimāṃsakas, on the other hand, hold that "no meaning in severalty is conveyed by any word, or no notion exists but in connection with another; so that then only do words really mean anything when they are joined into a sentence." Pramādāśa Mitra's Trans. of Sāhityadarpaṇa, page 163. The whole note should be read. So, too, that of Prof. Cowell on page 202 of Translation of Sarvadarś'anasuñgraha, which slightly modifies the above.

Page 134. "हिसानुग्रहयोरनारम्भी." This is a combination of two sūtras which stand thus in Stenzler's edition:—
 "समो भूतेषु हिसानुग्रहयोः ॥ २४ ॥ अनारम्भी ॥ २५ ॥." Dr. Bühler translates as follows:—"He shall be indifferent towards (all) creatures, (whether they do him) an injury or a kindness. He shall not undertake (anything for his temporal or spiritual welfare)".
